SCIENTIFIC OPPORTUNITY.
The seedless apple, so they say,
Will soon be here to greet us;
Which fact will lessen, we presume,
The dread appendicitis.
But Johnny on the orchard fence, Where oft he goes to frolic, Will still be twisted out of shape With early summer colic—Till scientists go further yet (We have some very keen ones) And grow our apples fully ripe Without there being green ones.

MURPHY, the Jeweler.

C. W. Naylor, the pictureman who was arrested for embezzlement, was arraigned in Squire Dressel's Court yesterday and his case continued in order that the accused may communicate with his people in New York. His bail was placed at $300, and in default he was committed to jail.

SHE SKIPPED OUT!

Mrs. Lee Kwong Leaves the City, Carrying Lee's Cash

The experience of Lee Kwong, the Sutton street laundryman, the past year has been a varied one.

In that brief period he has tasted of the sweet and bitter of life more largely than ordinarily falls to the lot of man.

His courtship, elopement and marriage was an experience itself, quickly followed by the destruction of his laundry establishment by an incendiary.

He was rehabilitated and placed upon his feet by kind and sympathetic friends, and it is no fault of Kwong's that he is not today a prosperous and happy laundryman.

He is honest and industrious.

Kwong's troubles and misfortunes began on the very day he contracted his misalliance.

The old adage of lying down with dogs and getting up with fleas fits his case to a T.

The environments of his girl wife previous to her marriage were such as to inculcate a willful disposition and make her a restless and wayward woman.

Notwithstanding her short-comings, Kwong loves his wife.

He has provided for her comfort and pleasure and lifted her on a higher plane of life than she occupied previous to her marriage, even though he be but a Chinaman.

The sequel to the above is that Mrs. Kwong has proven false to her marriage vows and flown with another fellow.

She left yesterday afternoon on the 3:25 Westbound C. and O. train, and ere this is enjoying illicit love with her drummer lover.

With her went Kwong's accumulations—$12 or $15, a gold watch he gave her as a bridal present, and other valuables.

The man in the case is said to be the tenor drummer of the Italian Band who won her affections during Carnival week.

There is no sympathy to be wasted on the woman, but the truly sad condition of the poor, heart-broken Kwong, as with tears streaming down his cheeks, he appeals to his friends to find a way for him to regain his unworthy wife, is a pitiable sight indeed.

"I will forgive and take her back; she is only a child and does not know the wrong she is doing," says Kwong.

"What will I do? I can't give her up," is the heart appeals of the deserted husband.

THE LEDGER sympathizes with this man in his distress, and believes there are a deal worse men than Lee Kwong in the land.

"There Isn't One
Really Good
Printer in Five Hundred."

Printers' Ink—the leading journal on publicity of all kinds—has the following to say: "There are thousands of printers in this country, good, indifferent, and a lot of bad ones. There isn't one really good printer in five hundred. Intelligent advertisers are willing to pay for good printing, no matter where it comes from.
Printers' Ink knows what it is talking about. Poor printing is a bad investment —it's worse than a blank. A business man's stationery or booklet is like a traveling man—If it's neat, well-dressed and to the point, the first impression is good and your chances of doing business on the strength of it are good.
We realize this. We keep abreast of the times. We know what good printing is and produce it. We are pretty careful not to let a bum job get onto our presses.
No press in the country can better our printing and we want you to know it.

CORRECTOR CORRECTED

How Some People Write History That Is Not Good History

DATE OF MOSELLE DISASTER.

To the Editor of The Commercial Tribune: I find a mistake in the date of the Moselle disaster. It occurred in July, 1842. I was but 8 years old when I saw the wounded carried past my home. Also, the Sultana, 1865, and the Magnolia, 1867, were omitted in the list of yesterday's edition. Please publish and correct the Moselle date and oblige, a subscriber, Cincinnati, June 17. A. E. G.

Shades of good old Cons Miller!

"A. E. G." is a bad hand to have at the wheel to steer the youngsters up against river history.

THE LEDGER begs to assure him that the Moselle exploded her boilers at Cincinnati April 25th, 1838.

The Magnolia blew up at California, O., just above Cincinnati, March 18th, 1868.

The ill-fated Sultana exploded her boilers 9 miles above Memphis, Tenn., about 1 o'clock in the morning of April 27th, 1865. She had on board 1,866 Federal soldiers who had been prisoners-of-war and who were on their way home from Vicksburg after being exchanged.
Of this number, 1,101 were lost, only 765 being saved. The passengers and crew numbered 155, of whom 137 were lost, making a total loss of 1,238.

The foregoing facts in regard to the Sultana disaster may be found in the reports by Government officials. See Series I, Vol 48, "War of the Rebellion: Official Records of the Union and Confederate Armies."

And it is strange that "Harper's Book of Facts," one of the most elaborate and trustworthy compilations, while giving a long list of the world's greatest marine disasters, omits all mention of the Sultana calamity, the most stupendous in history.

Besides, in every newspaper account that has come to THE LEDGER's attention, the number of lost has been greatly exaggerated, being generally stated at from 1,800 to 2,000, when the official reports give it at 1,238—which is surely horrifying enough.

BRACKEN SHOOTING

Henry Haley Shoots Allen Whalen of Sunrise, Harrison County

Allen Whalen of Sunrise, Harrison county, was shot and killed by Henry Haley at the latter's home about five miles South of Brooksville Sunday morning.

It seems that Whalen stopped there to stay all night, and in the morning was out in the yard with Mr. Haley's daughter.

He had been drinking, and it is alleged, became abusive to the girl.

Mr. Haley went out to quiet him, and engaged in a quarrel, when he made for Mr. Haley with a knife. Haley stepped into the house and secured his gun and shot him.

The load took effect in the stomach, killing him instantly.
